

Dear researchers

Thursday November 27th 2014 at 16:30 to 20:00, Society for Medical Student Research and Graduate School of Health once again organize once the successful Forskerdating (Research dating). The event will this time take place in Bartholin's auditorium (building 1241 room 135) and in building 1241 room 211.

The event is held after the faculty's introduction of the research year. It is a unique opportunity to establish contacts between research interested students and research groups that are seeking research year students for current projects or just want to promote their work.

We would like to invite your research group/department to attend this event and deliver a short oral presentation (4 min) in a plenary session and bring a poster for subsequent conversations with interested students one on one. A better opportunity to make contact with the medical students does not exist! Again this year, there will only be held one oral session, and the number of groups that can present is therefore limited. You will shortly after the deadline receive an email, notifying you whether you shall present orally and bring a poster or only the latter.

Recently, we have seen an increasing support for the event among the students, the respective departments and research groups. To best coordinate the oral presentations, you are kindly requested to reply before November 17th to the following email if you wish to participate.

We look forward to hearing from you!

The best research greetings

On behalf of the Society for Medical Student Research
